DOSAAF BYLAWS, ORGANIZATIONS, AND PERSONALITIES
SEPTEMBER 1951 - JANUARY 1953

[Numbers in parentheses refer to appended sources.]

INTRODUCTION

A little over a year and a half has passed since the merger of Dosarm, Dosflot, and Dosav into a single paramilitary society, Dosaaf (Volunteer Society for Cooperation with the Army, Air Force, and Navy). This period has been chiefly an organizational one, marked by the adoption of the society's bylaws and a general consolidation of paramilitary work.

First announcement of the society's bylaws appeared in an 18 June 1952 Patriot Rodiny article. This was followed by a series of articles in Patriot Rodiny and Kryl'ya Rodiny during the summer of 1952 discussing the bylaws. No exact date was given for the adoption of the bylaws but a 24 September 1952 Patriot Rodiny article stated that the bylaws had been adopted during the summer of 1952. In addition, no mention was made of the manner in which the bylaws were adopted. As provided for in the bylaws themselves, this action should have been taken by an all-union conference. However, in the 15 months which have elapsed since Dosaaf's organization, no such conference has been reported. The bylaws also provide for the election of Dosaaf committees to replace the organizational committees (orgkomitety), but despite their adoption no such elections have been reported and the Soviet press continues to refer to Dosaaf committees as "organizational committees."

Following the breakup of Osoaviakhim (paramilitary society in existence from 1927 - 1948) into Dosarm, Dosflot, and Dosav in May 1948, the committees of all three volunteer societies were also referred to as organizational committees. However, after approximately a year, in June and July 1949, conferences were held on the rayon, city, oblast, and republic level. These were followed by a Dosav all-union conference in July and by Dosarm and Dosflot all-union conferences in September, at which charters were adopted and a central committee and auditing commission elected.

Following the conferences, the term "organizational" was dropped.

Dosaaf's purpose and general organizational structure, as established by the bylaws, is similar to that of the old defense societies. It is interesting to note, however, that the membership age has been lowered from 15 (as it was under Dosarm, Dosflot, and Dosav) to 14. The membership age was also 14 under Osoaviakhim, predecessor of Dosarm, Dosflot, and Dosav. In addition, according to the Dosaaf bylaws, dues are only 3 rubles a year as compared with 3 rubles a month under Dosarm, Dosflot, and Dosav.

This report is based almost entirely on information from Patriot Rodiny and Kryl'ya Rodiny, official organs of the volunteer society. Patriot Rodiny is a semiweekly newspaper; Kryl'ya Rodiny is a monthly periodical devoted mainly to air-training news. The society also publishes a monthly, Voyennoye Znaniye, copies of which have not been available to CIA since 1951, but 1953 copies of which are now being received. In addition to the above sources, the report contains information from Radio, a monthly devoted to radio news, which is published jointly by the Ministry of Communications USSR and Dosaaf, plus information from the central and union-republic daily press. The report covers the period from the unification of Dosarm, Dosflot, and Dosav in September 1951 through January 1953.

Part one of the report describes Dosaaf's purpose and general organizational structure. Part two deals with Dosaaf's training organs, awards, and titles, and part three with questions of party and government connections with the society.

The report is followed by appendices listing members of Dosaaf organizational committees down to the oblast level, and Dosaaf clubs and PVKhO (anti-aircraft and chemical defense) schools identified. A description and reproduction of Dosaaf's flag and the badge "For Active Work" are also appended.

I. PURPOSE AND GENERAL ORGANIZATIONAL STRUCTURE

A. Purpose

According to its bylaws, Dosaaf is "a mass organization of the workers of the USSR established on a voluntary basis, with the aim of strengthening the Soviet Army, Air Force, and Navy." The task of the society is to disseminate military information among its members and among the population and to prepare them for all types of antiaircraft and chemical defense. Members are required to become specialists in an area within the general military field chosen by them and must also engage in some form of mass sport work. Mass sports included in the bylaws are skiing, marksmanship, flying, parachute jumping, gliding, amateur radio technique, automobilism, motorcycling, horseback riding, model airplane and ship construction, and service dog breeding.(1)

B. Organization

1. Governing Bodies

According to its bylaws, Dosaaf's highest governing organ is the all-union conference, which meets every 4 years. The all-union conference decides important questions determining the society's course of action and confirms and makes all necessary changes in the society's by-laws, emblem, and flag. The all-union conference elects its executive organs, the Central Committee and Central Auditing Commission of Dosaaf.

The bylaws state that in the period between all-union conferences the Central Committee assumes leadership of the society. The Central Committee, elected for a 4-year term, holds a plenary session at least once a year. It represents Dosaaf at all state and public functions, Dosaaf clubs, schools, technical laboratories and other institutions, and establishes their particular work program. The Central Committee elects a Presidium, consisting of a chairman, deputies, and other members. The Presidium is responsible for the daily leadership of the society. Decisions of the Central Committee and its Presidium are binding on all Dosaaf organizations and members.

The bylaws also provide for the establishment of Dosaaf organizations and committees on the union and autonomous republic, kray, okrug, oblast, city, and rayon levels. Union-republic Dosaaf conferences are called not less than once every 4 years; republic committees and auditing commissions are elected for a 4-year term. Autonomous republic, kray, oblast, city, and rayon conferences are held not less than once every 2 years and their respective committees and auditing commissions are elected for a 2-year term. Union-republic Dosaaf committees are required to hold a plenary session at least once a year and to elect a Presidium.(2)

The provisions set forth in the above three paragraphs have not been carried out to date. As noted in the introduction, no conferences or elections have been reported and committees are still called "organizational committees." In its present structure, Dosaaf leadership is supplied by a USSR organizational committee, union-republic organizational committees in all of the union republics except the RSFSR, and organizational committees on the ASSR, kray, oblast, and rayon levels. These committees were set up at the time of the unification of Dosarm, Dosflot, and Dosav into Dosaaf in August 1951 for the purpose of formulating unification of primary organizations and directing the society's practical work until election of administrative bodies. The hierarchical relationship of these committees is undoubtedly the same as that of the Party and the typical Soviet public organization, with union-republic committees, and oblast, kray, and ASSR committees in the RSFSR directly responsible to the USSR committee, and oblast and ASSR committees in all of the union republics except the RSFSR immediately subordinate to their respective union-republic committees.

50X1-HUM

2. Primary Organizations; Membership and Dues

According to the bylaws, primary organizations of Dosaaf may be organized in all enterprises and institutions, kolkhozes, factories, schools, etc., where there are at least three members of the society. In primary organizations with more than 100 members, subordinate organizations may be created in shops, work shifts, kolkhoz brigades, etc. These lower-level organizations are granted the rights of a primary organization. In primary organizations with a membership of less than 100, groups may be formed along the lines of shops, work shifts, etc.

The bylaws state that the highest governing organ of the primary organization is the general meeting. The meeting is considered properly constituted if at least two thirds of the Dosaaf members are present. A meeting of members of a primary organization must be held at least once every 3 months.

In order to conduct the business of a primary organization with 15 or more members, a committee is elected at the general meeting for a one-year term. The number of members on the committee is determined by the general meeting; the committee elects a chairman, deputy chairman, and treasurer. In organizations with less than 15 members, chairmen and deputy chairmen are elected; in groups, group organizers are elected.

Primary organizations with 15 or more members also elect an auditing commission for a one-year term. The commission is responsible for inspecting regularity in expenditures and in the collection of membership dues, for maintenance of training appliances and premises, and for recording membership and the minutes of meetings. Members of committees of Dosaaf primary organizations may not serve on the auditing commission. In primary organizations with less than 15 members, an inspector is elected.

According to the bylaws, the primary organization's monetary funds consist of initiation fees, 30 percent of the membership dues, funds allocated by public organizations and institutions concerned with development of the society's activity, and other receipts. These funds are spent by the committee for training needs in accordance with estimates made by the general meeting.

Dosaaf membership is open to all citizens of the USSR who have reached the age of 14. Members are accepted into the society on written application. The question of admission is decided by the committee of the primary organization, or where there is no such committee, by a general meeting of the primary organization. Only members who have reached the age of 18 may be elected to leadership positions, except for primary organizations of secondary schools, FZO schools, etc., where members under 18 may be elected.(2)

As provided for in the bylaws, Dosaaf members pay a membership fee of 3 rubles a year, either in one or two installments. Members of secondary, trade, railroad, and FZO schools and also housewives pay dues of one ruble a year. There is an initiation fee of one ruble plus a fee for the cost of the application blank. Students of children's homes are exempted from payment of all dues and fees.(1)

A study of the Dosaaf press indicated that bylaw provisions relating to the establishment of Dosaaf primary organizations and to Dosaaf membership and payment of dues are in force. However, since adoption of the bylaws, there have been no reports of primary organization elections. Primary organization elections were held in the fall of 1951 at the time of unification [redacted]

3. Sections Under Committees

According to several articles in Kryl'ya Rodiny and Patriot Rodiny, the by-laws provide for the creation of sections under the central, union-republic, kray, okrug, oblast, city, rayon, and large primary organization committees. These sections help the committees work out questions pertaining to training, military-sport, and propaganda work, and are indispensable in helping to review and correct activities of primary organizations and to eliminate equipment shortages. The sections are also said to play an important part in strengthening the link between Dosaaf primary organizations and party primary organizations, and between trade and other public organizations. An article in Patriot Rodiny reported that the Organizational Committee of Dosaaf USSR has recommended the establishment of the following sections under organizational committees: organizational work; propagation of military, military technical, air and naval information; antiaircraft and chemical defense; military training and military sports; military technical training and sports; air training and air sports; naval training and naval sports.(3)

The following sections have been identified as being under the Organizational Committee of Dosaaf USSR: auto-motor training and sports (4), service dog (5), parachute (6), Naval training and sports (7), and organizational-auditing (8).

II. TRAINING ORGANS, AWARDS, AND TITLES

A. Primary Organization Training

Dosaaf relies on its primary organization system for the training of the majority of its members. Primary organizations are responsible for setting up study circles and groups to cover all phases of military and sport work. The variety of groups set up by an individual primary organization depends on its size, the desire of its members, and on other factors such as locality, available equipment and instructors. Among the most frequent types of courses mentioned in the Dosaaf press are marksmanship, parachute jumping and packing, motorcycling, automobile driving, rowing, and PVKhO (antiaircraft and chemical defense), which is compulsory for all primary organizations.

B. Clubs

Dosaaf operates a network of air, navy, radio, rifle-sport, cavalry, automobile-motorcycle, and service dog breeding clubs, many of which were in existence under Osoaviakhim, Dosarm, Dosav, and Dosflot. These clubs afford advanced training for Dosaaf members in their particular specialty and provide a base for the training of Dosaaf instructors. Clubs are headed by a chief, a deputy chief for political affairs, and an elected council whose members direct the various club sections.

Air clubs provide training in flying, parachuting, gliding, model construction, and in the care of aircraft equipment. The following air club sections have been identified: airplane, glider, parachute, and airplane model construction.(9) References to "aviatekh" clubs have also appeared in the Dosaaf press, but such references have failed to specify the difference between "aviatekh" and air clubs. Both an air club and an aviatekh club have been identified in Alma-Ata; the aviatekh club was described as training aircraft engine mechanics, glider pilots, parachutists, and instrument technicians.(10)

According to its by-laws, Dosaaf is responsible for establishing its own airfields.(1) Mentions of club airfields have appeared in the Dosaaf press. In one article, a Dosaaf airfield and "parachute city" several kilometers from Makhachkala, capital of Dagestanskaya ASSR, RSFSR, were mentioned.(11)

Dosaaf also operates glider stations and parachute towers.

Navy clubs offer training in all types of boating, ship model construction, signaling, navigation, and other allied fields. A Patriot Rodiny article describing a well-organized navy club listed the following sections: rowing and sailing, ship model construction, and training methods. The article placed special emphasis on the training methods section, whose purpose was described as that of "preparing instructors, trainers, and judges, and of aiding leaders of groups, circles, courses and sport teams of primary organizations." (9) Navy clubs also operate water sport stations.

Radio clubs train telegraph, teletype, and amateur short-wave operators. These clubs have been active in volkhoz radiofication and in setting up experimental television centers. Radio clubs sponsor exhibitions and encourage members in set designing. For example, at the tenth all-union exhibition of the works of amateur radio designers held in Moscow in May 1952, 400 sets designed and made by Dosaaf members were exhibited.(12) Radio club members take part in various competitions. It was recently reported that members of the short-wave section of the Kostroma Radio Club had taken part in the regular radio communication competitions conducted between Czechoslovak and Soviet amateur radio operators. During these competitions, over a 14-hour work period, 103 contacts were made between short-wave operators of the Satellite countries and Soviet cities.(10)

Service dog breeding clubs are responsible for training dogs for army service. Public demonstrations of club work and the training of dogs to tow skiers have been reported in articles on the activities of these clubs, but, in general, the activities of these clubs are rarely mentioned in the Dosaaf press.

Articles which have appeared in the Soviet press on rifle-sports, cavalry, and automobile-motorcycle clubs have dealt chiefly with reports of contests or races, and with the training of instructors for Dosaaf primary organizations.

C. PVKhO Training; PVKhO Schools

PVKhO training is an important element in Dosaaf's program. During the past year, articles in the Dosaaf press have continually emphasized the need for improving this type of training, and it has become compulsory for every Dosaaf primary organization to set up a PVKhO study circle.

In order to train instructors for these circles, Dosaaf operates a network of schools and instructor-training courses under its organizational committees. In this way the society seeks to establish a well-trained nucleus in each primary organization and relies upon this nucleus to train other members of that particular organization. Mention has been made in Dosaaf publications of factories sending several workers to the oblast or local PVKhO school for training. The workers then return to the factories as instructors to set up training circles in each workshop.(13)

References to PVKhO training in Dosaaf publications are largely confined to items on graduating classes, the establishment of PVKhO study circles, and contests between PVKhO teams. Occasional articles have appeared on such subjects as how to extinguish an incendiary bomb (14), the construction of an air-raid shelter etc.

D. Other Schools and Institutions

Apart from PVKhO schools, the only other schools identified during the period covered in this report were the Central Glider School (10) and the Central School for Technical Training. The latter's medical unit was mentioned in connection with an article written by the head of the medical unit, T. Selezneva; in which he discusses treatment of persons felled by ordinary war gases.(15)

Mention has also been made in Dosaaf publications of the Central Naval Model Laboratory (16) and the Central Air Model Laboratory.(17)

E. Awards and Titles

Dosaaf members participate in contests with other sports societies and groups and are awarded the regular sport titles -- Master of Sport; Sportsman (first, second, or third class), etc. -- established by the Committee for Physical Culture and Sport Affairs under the Council of Ministers USSR. In addition, Dosaaf members who distinguish themselves, particularly in propaganda and instructional work, are awarded a special badge, "For Active Work," by the Central Committee of Dosaaf USSR.(14) Dosaaf also has its own red banner award system, in which banners are awarded outstanding primary organizations, clubs, etc. Mention has also been made in Dosaaf publications of the awarding of cash prizes.(14)

III. CONNECTIONS BETWEEN DOSAAF, THE PARTY, AND GOVERNMENT

A. Dosaaf, Party, and Komsomol Organizations

A study of Dosaaf publications indicates that the party exercises control over Dosaaf similar to that over other public organizations, and that constant efforts are being made to further cooperation between party, Komsomol, and Dosaaf organizations.

An article in Patriot Rodiny devoted to a meeting of the plenum of the Rostov city Komsomol committee contained the following: "A decision of the eight plenum of the All-Union Komsomol Central Committee makes it mandatory for every Komsomol member to become a member of Dosaaf, to study some military specialty, and to work ceaselessly for the strengthening of the active defense of the motherland." (18) However, a list of the decisions adopted by the All-Union Komsomol Central Committee at its eighth plenum, as published in Komsomol'skaya Pravda, fails to include such a mandatory provision. (19)

An article by the secretary of the Estonian Komsomol Central Committee stated that all city and rayon Komsomol committees had been ordered by the republic Komsomol Central Committee to train a certain percentage of their members as Dosaaf instructors and to organize Dosaaf primary organizations wherever needed. (3) Other articles have urged Komsomol members to join Dosaaf in order to fulfill their military study requirements. (20)

Dosaaf's activities are discussed and judged by the bureaus of republic party central committees. At a meeting of the Bureau of the Central Committee, Communist Party of Kazakhstan, the "low level" of Dosaaf work was discussed, and party organizations as well as Dosaaf organizational committees were criticized for not giving the matter sufficient attention. (20) Many such instances of party control have appeared in the Dosaaf press.

B. Dosaaf Links With Government Organizations

Pavel Ivanovich Malkov has been identified as chairman of the committee for Dosaaf primary organizations under the Ministry of Foreign Trade USSR (22) and G. Lukaptskiy, a reserve officer, as chairman of a similar committee under the Ministry of the Construction Materials Industry USSR. (23) However, nothing further is known as to the nature and function of these committees.

It is assumed that Dosaaf is closely connected with the military, principally through the reserve-officer system, and with other governmental ministries and departments which have an interest in certain aspects of its program, such as the Ministry of Communications USSR (radio clubs) and the Ministry of Internal Affairs USSR (PVKhO training, and possibly the training of service dogs for the border troops of the MVD). However, no concrete mention of any such connections has been found in Dosaaf publications during the period covered in this report.

Appendix A. Dosaaf Organizational Committees

The following persons have been identified as members of Dosaaf organizational committees and of subordinated units of the committees. Besides their present position with Dosaaf, the connections with forerunners of Dosaaf (Osoviakhim, Dosarm, Dosflot, Dosav) are also given when noted by the source(s).⁷

Appendix D. Description of Dosaaf Flag and "For Active Work" BadgeDosaaf Flag

Dosaaf's flag is rectangular (3:2 in relation of length to width), is red in color, and has the society's emblem in the upper left-hand corner. The emblem consists of a white oval, framed by a gilt laurel wreath. A carbine and submachine gun cross in the center of the oval; at the point of intersection is a five-pointed star with a hammer and sickle in the center of the star. At the bottom of the oval is an anchor, and at the top, an airplane in flight. A red ribbon with the inscription "Dosaaf USSR" crowns the oval. On the lower part of the flag, running its entire length, at a distance from the bottom of one sixth the width of the flag, is the ribbon of the Order of the Red Banner (red with white stripes.)(1)

"For Active Work" Badge

The Dosaaf "For Active Work" (Za aktivnyu rabotu) badge is worn on the right. It is diamond-shaped, white, with a light blue border. In the center of the diamond is a red five-pointed star with a gold hammer and a sickle, symbolizing the Soviet Army. Behind the star is a steel-colored anchor, symbolizing the Soviet Navy. Below the star and anchor is a red ribbon on which is inscribed "For Active Work." On the lower part of the diamond are a pair of gilt wings and a propeller, symbolizing the Soviet Air Force. Near the upper point of the diamond is a white ribbon with the gilt inscription "Dosaaf USSR." Surrounding the central part of the diamond are gold laurel leaves, symbolizing honor and glory.(14)
